

Tim in KY VaE Stage 4 is 176 kilometers from Cullera to El Puig, both on the Mediterranean coast of central Spain. But the bulk of the riding is once again on the inland hills to the west.

26-Aug-2019
16:02:19

Tim in KY The first 35 kilometers and final 20 km are pan flat. The rest are slightly lumpy with a Cat 3 climb that crests 46 km from the line. Officially the climb is 6 km at 4.5%, but the road actually starts up 16 km before the summit. That may cull some of the sprinters as the late climb on stage 3 did.

Charlie in Tenn Good morning

27-Aug-2019
06:42:03

Tim in KY Good morning, Charlie. Today the junk men are coming to haul away the 50 years of accumulated worthlessness. I will miss the finish of the race.

27-Aug-2019
06:48:01

BusterSci I just had 3 yards of crap hauled away from the garage, mostly stuff from the last wet basement episode. I love throwing crap out. I have another chunk of stuff that's good enough for the donation pile.

27-Aug-2019
06:52:37

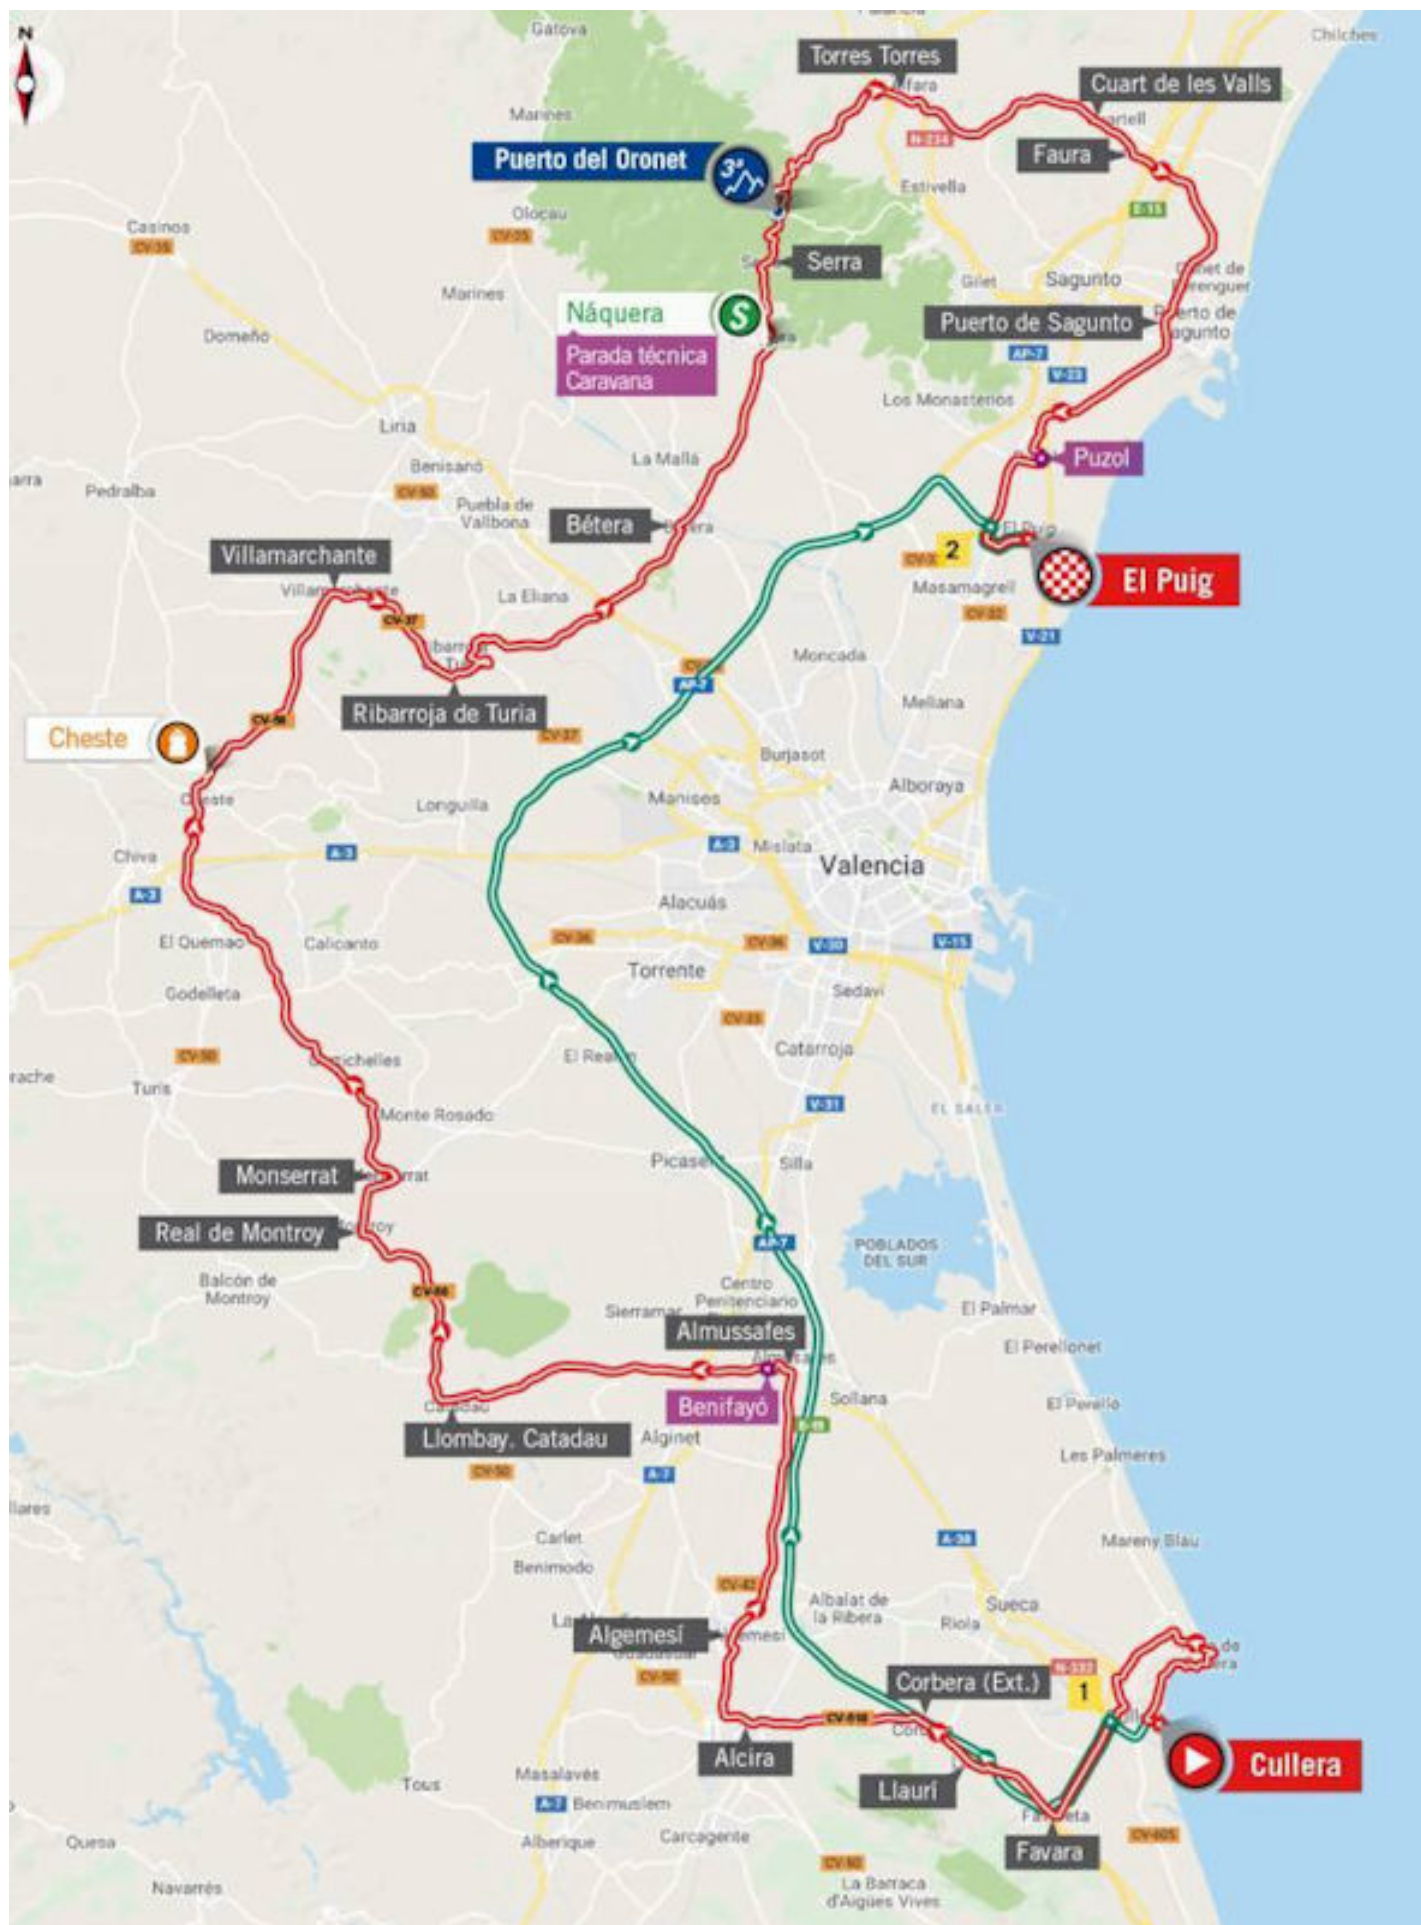

Charlie in Tenn OK, I will be here. My unboxing went well yesterday but I am now working on sorting some stuff into the extra bedroom/hobby room. Looks like a bunch of trips climbing (upstairs) for me today.

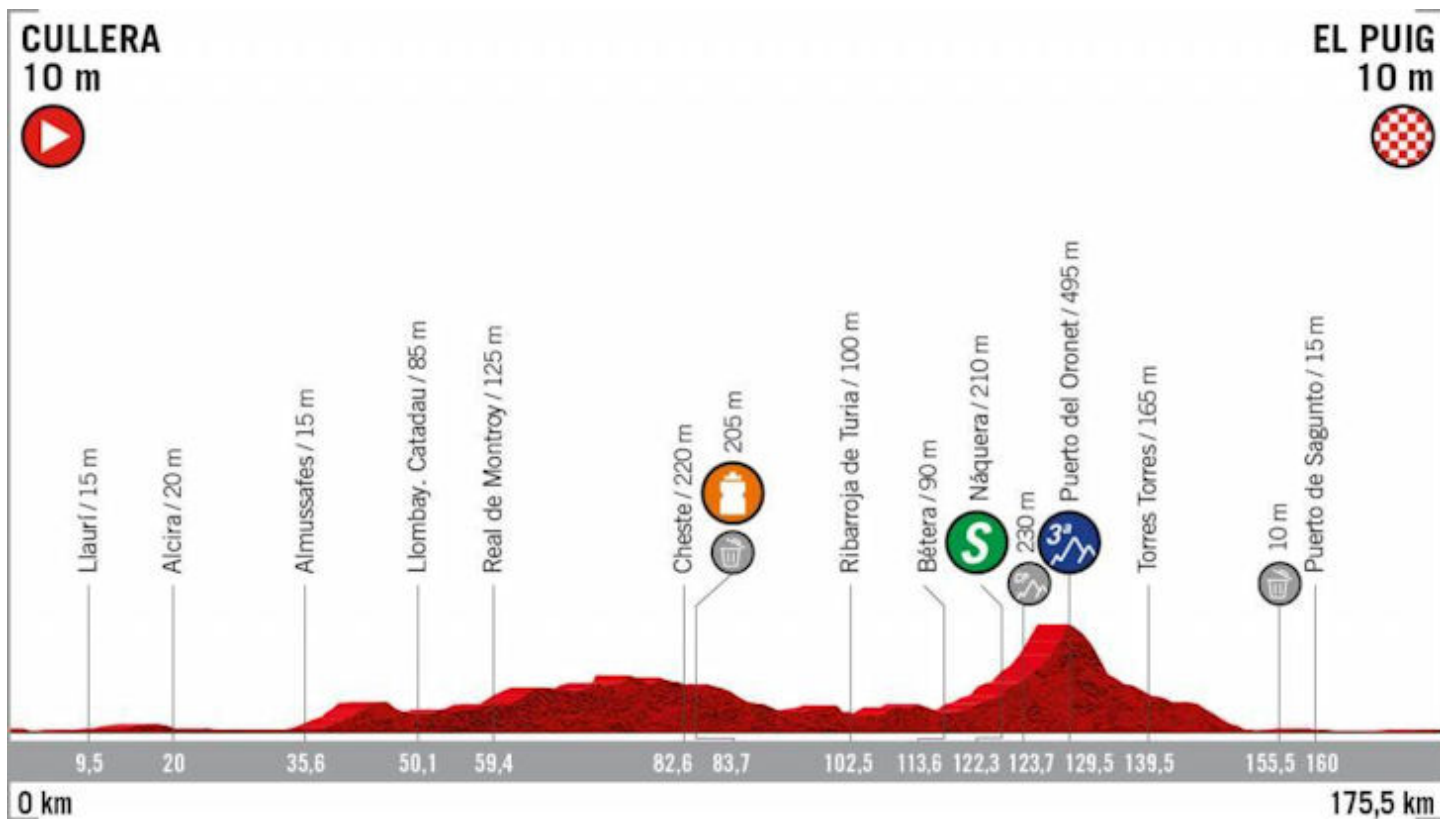

27-Aug-2019
06:53:58

BusterSci Ja, Charlie. You will pomp up your thighs and glutes!

27-Aug-2019
06:55:07

Charlie in Tenn Probably not at the pace I will be moving. Laughing group for me. 27-Aug-2019 06:56:04

Tim in KY Riders should be in neutral, but no word of it. 27-Aug-2019 07:02:31

Tim in KY Just in time to watch the paint dry. 27-Aug-2019 07:32:15

SFinAus heh 27-Aug-2019 07:32:21

SFinAus Stages 1 and 2 were interesting 27-Aug-2019 07:32:59

Tim in KY Jelle Wallays (Lotto Soudal) and Jorge Cubero (Burgos-BH) already have 1:17. Sprint stages make for easy breaks. Doomed, but easy. 27-Aug-2019 07:33:36

Charlie in Tenn Lotto Soudal is spending a lot of time at the front. Possible homage to their fallen teammate, Bjorg Lambrecht.

27-Aug-2019
07:37:44

Tim in KY Do they have a sprinter here?

27-Aug-2019
07:54:23

BusterSci Maybe just controlling to make it easier for Wallays to grow the gap.

27-Aug-2019
07:55:09

Charlie in Tenn Wallays was who I was talking about. De Ghent made his little effort yesterday. Same idea. Of course, TV time in a break and winning stages is a big thing for sponsors so maybe it is just bike racing.

27-Aug-2019
07:58:45

BusterSci Wallays may be a different deal, but I'd never assume De Gendt is off the front for any reason other than he's De Gendt.

27-Aug-2019
08:05:12

BusterSci Looking at the team roster, especially with De Gendt wearing 91, Lotto doesn't have a sprinter, doesn't have a GC guy, and generally has a team for breaks and stages.

27-Aug-2019
08:10:07

Tim in KY Well this is the wrong break.

27-Aug-2019
08:14:53

SFinAus Maybe this is Lotto's take on the Skye/Ineos tactic of resting people for an upcoming day. Give De Gendt a day off when the break won't make it, but still garner some TV exposure?

27-Aug-2019
08:21:23

Charlie in Tenn I think it is all TV exposure today.

27-Aug-2019
08:22:17

Tim in KY With 135 km to go and the gap at 6:48, Bora has put a man on the front.

27-Aug-2019
08:23:42

Tim in KY Next question is, are UAE, Trek and DQS going to help Bora chase today.

27-Aug-2019
08:27:46

Katie Good morning, all.

27-Aug-2019
08:33:14

Charlie in Tenn UAE probably needs to see if Gavaria can get over the cat 3. The other should help a little.

27-Aug-2019
08:34:30

SFinAus Hello, Katie

27-Aug-2019
08:36:08

Tim in KY Apparently still just Bora. The gap is down to 5:40. ASO ticker says Cubero has a degree in civil engineering. If necessary, I guess, he can make his own roads.

27-Aug-2019
08:43:27

Charlie in Tenn Always good to have a back-up.

27-Aug-2019
08:49:06

BusterSci We could use a whole lot more civility in the world, so I hope he's good at engineering it.

27-Aug-2019
08:49:46

Tim in KY Now there are small spotty thunderstorms popping up to the northwest of the peloton.

27-Aug-2019
08:50:52

27-Aug-2019
